Microsoft's operating system comes with good, basic software that you can use on your computer. For example, Windows 10 has the web browser Edge, a calculator, alarm clock, maps and other tools.

If you want it to do more than the basics, though, you can pay for Microsoft Office 365 and you can add third-party software, like photo editors, graphics programs, utilities, games, productivity software and much more. If you've been using a computer for a while, you probably knew that. What you might not know is that Microsoft has a lot of other software programs that you can get for free.

Who doesn't want free stuff? Besides, these popular computer programs have stood the test of time. Meaning, millions of people just like you have worked out the bugs a long time ago. So, you can download any one of these programs, or all of them, to instantly boost your productivity.
