If you've ever struggled to sleep at night, you probably already know that late-night TV is fantastic for one reason: nostalgia. If you are scrolling through channels after hours, you'll be lucky to find a selection of shows that reminds you of your youth.

From old television commercials to "I Love Lucy" reruns, sometimes a walk down memory lane can be just what you need. What if there was a way to find all these gems in one place, no matter the time of day?

Thanks to one fun site, there is now an easy way to experience nostalgia wherever you are, with just your laptop or phone. If you miss classic TV, you'll get lost in nostalgia with these classic TV shows.

My nostalgic TV

If you like taking a walk down memory lane, you aren't alone. Joey Cato was reminiscing about his youth and wanted to view all his television memories in one place. So he created a site for each decade with all your favorite content.

He reviews each clip from every decade and curates them into one place, moving them from YouTube himself. He credits each video, which you can view on the screen.

Each decade currently has thousands of clips available, all viewable on a cute TV screen that reminds you of your grandmother's living room. The entire collection has over 125,000 clips, so you'll likely never run out of things to watch. Each decade is broken into multiple categories like music, news, and soaps, so you can choose the type of clips you are most interested in viewing.

How it works

When you head to any of the decades, you'll be brought to a page with an old-looking television. Press the power button, and a random clip will appear on the screen. If you want to skip to the next channel, press the up or down button.

The volume buttons work as well. Press up or down to adjust the volume. Click the menu button for a list of keyboard shortcuts to manage the on-screen television.
